Announcement

Additional information about the call for expression of interest in collaborating with the Banco de España in the development of experiments on the use of digital tokens for the settlement of wholesale payments and securities: possible technical incidents.

On account of the occurrence of incidents of a technical nature which may eventually hinder or prevent potentially interested organizations from submitting their respective proposals through the Electronic Registry of the Banco de España, as described in the announcement of the experimentation program published on December 5, 2022, these parties are exceptionally allowed to send the requested documentation in person or by post mail. They may also choose to use the generic contact form which is available on the web. In the latter case, interested organizations must explicitly include in the Asunto field the following text: “Participar en la experimentación con tokens digitales mayoristas por incidencias de carácter técnico”.

Both for the in person presentation and the use of post mail, interested organizations may either visit one of Banco de España’s physical offices located throughout the Spanish jurisdiction or, alternatively, they may send their correspondence to the following physical address:
