Review of the Eurosystem framework for the provision of euro liquidity lines

On 3 August 2023 the Governing Council approved a new framework for the provision of euro liquidity lines to non-euro area central banks, following an in-depth review of the previous framework in place and the experience over the past years. The new framework upholds the role of liquidity lines as monetary policy instruments, retains the fundamental elements of the framework in place so far but streamlines it, and integrates the existing repo facilities into a unified framework called EUREP. The new framework will come into effect on 16 January 2024 and, as of that date, will apply to those existing liquidity lines that may be extended and other liquidity lines to be established. Most of the current temporary lines and the previous temporary EUREP facility will expire on 15 January 2024. More detailed information will be provided via ECB publications.
