

27 November-1 December

Aim and content

This year the International Seminar on Central Banking (ISCB) is held under the broad title “Two decades of central banking”.

In this celebration of our twentieth meeting we will go through and take stock of the changes central banks have undergone in the past century due to more or less foreseeable circumstances: the fourth industrial revolution, the global economic and financial crisis, the pandemic and the current wars...all within their mandate to preserve financial and price stability in an increasingly globalized and uncertain international context.

Every year from its beginning this seminar seeks to gather professionals, experts and specialists in central banks' functions from countries all around the world with the aim of sharing approaches, expertise and best practices. Besides, the International Seminar on Central Banking, has traditionally sought the promotion of professional contacts and expert networks which reinforce institutional relations among central banks.

The exchange of knowledge, all new projects put forward in every edition and the creation of stronger ties between participant institutions give full sense and meaning to our international cooperation activity.

Professional profile of attendees

The seminar is aimed at central bank professionals and financial sector supervisors and regulators with at least three years of experience and a high potential for professional development, and the ability to offer their own views and play an active part in the seminar discussions.

Organisation and format

The edition will be held online, in Spanish, with simultaneous interpretation into English.

The seminar is organised by the Banco de España and will be held in half-day sessions owing to the time difference. Experts and high-level officials from all the Banco de España's Directorates General and other participating institutions will address the topics proposed and agreed in advance. Participation is by invitation only.
